The Eyes Have It

Just like ancients from the Golden Age of Aviation, vintage eye glasses have that certain panache that exudes cool. Nobody crafts antique eyewear better than Nadir Zadi with his CustomEyes collection. Zadi has a passion for rimless, semi-rimless and full frames originally produced between the 1900s to the 1940s. He fashions these vintage pieces into modern eyewear, hand ground to match your prescription or into non-prescription turned lenses of unsurpassed quality. To view the collection in person, you'll need to fly to his studio in Manhattan's Upper East Side, open by appointment only. But haven't you been longing for a reason to visit the Big Apple? You can also see his designs on line. Pricing available upon request. Razeframes.com, 212.249.5609.
